About Almere

Located in the central area of the country, Almere is the youngest, greenest city in the Netherlands. More than 220,000 people live here, making it the country's eighth largest city. As a green city of the future, Almere was the perfect choice to host Floriade Expo 2022, with its theme was, 'Growing green cities'.

The construction of Almere started forty years ago, on the reclaimed bed of the former Zuiderzee. Silent memorials of this past are the 27 shipwrecks found here, the oldest dating back to the 15th century. And when you visit Almere, you'll not only be walking on the old bed of the Zuiderzee - you'll be in a city which itself lies between 2 and 5 metres below sea level!

This connection with the water is still visible today. Half of Almere's surface area is water, which is why the city has more than 800 bridges – most of them built with circular construction methods. (That's twice as many bridges as Venice!) For water sports enthusiasts and beach lovers there are nine city beaches and a coastline of 42 kilometres, offering a wide variety of water sports.

City districts

Almere consists of a number of districts, each with its own unique character. Although this young city has a relatively short history, there are distinct differences between the various parts of the city. Almere Haven, the oldest district, is also called the 'dorp' – the inner-city 'village'. The attractive harbour with its famous Havenkom (harbour basin) is a popular place to enjoy the sunshine in the summer. Almere Stad is home to a large shopping centre, intimate squares with restaurants, and world-famous architecture. Chill out at Almere Poort, on the city's biggest beach, where you'll also find a wide range of water sports. Then there's Almere Buiten – which is all about green. This district is home to the unique nature reserve of Oostvaardersplassen. And In Almere Hout you'll come across Oosterwold, a unique, green neighbourhood. Here the residents are free to build homes of their own design, and they apply sustainable methods when working the soil. It's the ultimate, green, DIY approach to residential development.

World-famous architecture

Almere is not even half a century young. And it shows! So don't expect an historic centre with centuries-old canals and heritage buildings. However, there's still a lot of great architecture to discover in Almere. So much, that it's been called an open-air architecture museum. The city is rich in modern, architectural masterpieces designed by world-famous architects such as Rem Koolhaas, René van Zuur and Herman Hertzberger. This makes Almere Centrum an ideal destination for lovers of design and architecture. With even more, unique buildings and neighbourhoods in other parts of the city. Yes, the modern city of Almere is on the itinerary of architecture-lovers - from all over the world!

Unique nature - on reclaimed land

Almere is surrounded by five, very special nature reserves - Oostvaardersplassen, Lepelaarplassen, Pampushout, Vroege Vogelbos and Boswachterij Almeerderhout. The Oostvaardersplassen and Lepelaarplassen form part of the country's newest national park - Nationaal Park Nieuw Land. Oostvaardersplassen, Almere's rugged backyard, is known as the 'savannah of the north'. Here Heck cattle, Konik horses, red deer and foxes roam a special marshland area, also internationally known as a paradise for birds like egrets, Eurasian bitterns, kingfishers, bearded reedlings, reed buntings and the rare white-tailed eagle. The Lepelaarplassen is a protected nature reserve of clay swampland. Home to marsh birds and cormorants, it is also a breeding ground for meadow birds and ducks.

Accessibility

Almere is centrally located in the Netherlands. The train from Amsterdam Central Station to Almere Centrum takes only 20 minutes. Six train stations, regional bus transport and multi-lane motorways ensure that Almere is easy to reach, from every direction. Travel within the city is also well-planned, with features like dedicated bus lanes and 440 km of dedicated bicycle paths contributing to safe, efficient traffic flow. Moving between the various parts of the city is easy and quick, regardless of the type of transport chosen. Almere is a spacious city, covering a large area. And convenient for groups travelling in tour buses.
